From Prototype to Retail Shelf: What Inventors Really Need to Win

Turning a great idea into a product on the retail shelf takes more than passion and a patent. In this fireside chat, Carmine Denisco, President of the United Inventors Association, joins Wayne Bennett to walk through the real-world journey from first prototype to in-market success.

We'll unpack what inventors must have in place at each stage: smart validation before you spend, practical IP strategy, realistic costing and pricing, retail-ready packaging and branding, and the operational basics buyers expect. Carmine will share common mistakes that stall promising inventions—and the moves that separate hobby projects from scalable businesses.

Inventors will leave with a clear, honest roadmap and tangible next steps to get closer to the shelf.
